THE Customs' Reports for the half year ending the 30th June, 1871, which have been issued by the Imperial Maritime Customs, although not so interesting as the annual reports, published under the auspices of the Inspectorate, nevertheless contain many matters which are worthy of notice. The most a quarter to five. striking feature, as our readers will doubtless be already prepared to learn, is the return which they give concerning the ener sending a reply to the Hon. The increase has been mainly in Grey Goods, but other staples have also been in excess of previous from the report of the steamer Douglas that years. At Shanghai, we find that the total she had to put into Amoy through stress of of Grey Shirtings for the half year is as much as 3,210,694 pieces, against only Shanghai, and the increase of the importacrease of trade with the port, as it appears from the statement of Mr. HANNE, Com, missioner of Customs at Tientsin, that the merchants there prefer making their purchases in the Shanghai market. He states that natives have been repairing to Shanghai to buy the identical goods with which the godowns of foreign firms at Tientsin have been filled, and which have been offered them at five caudareens to a mace lower price than that given in the Shanghai mar- of unchecked crime in the Colony, the repent Goedts, of the same ship, in that on board of ket for millions of pieces. This anomalous action of the non-official Justices of the Peace, state of affairs he accounts for by the fact. that nearly all the Tientsin Merchants have and the further steps to be taken by the resident the thousand the captain denied striking combranck houses at Shanghai, through which facilities for purchase and payment are provided; and that as the market there has been glutted, they are able to make large purchases, without affecting prices; whereas a few purchases at Tientsin would at once send prices up. No stronger illustration could a Committee should be appointed to complete possibly be given of the evil results which have been produced by overstocking the market. No wonder Mr. Hennen says that to the superficial observer the main trade of Great Britain with China ddring the past six months appears as if Cotton Piece-goods had been forced off at rainous prices, in order to secure the possibility of losing an additional sum on Tea in London. This terse way of putting the matter may not be very acceptable, but it certainly does seem unaccountable that merchants should prefer selling large quantities of goods at a loss to smaller quantities at a profit. Is it that trade with China is conducted on the principle on which the Irish draper said he Colonial Office, that we have thought it best to s ld his handkerchiefs-"so, cheap that he lost on every one, but he made it up in the quantity!" Possibly, however, the and in compliance with the requirements of the home of manufacturers' and steamer-owners' Memorial, signatures and annexures are forinterests with the purely mercantile business, that is to say, that a large quantity of goods are shipped not because they show a profit between the prices at home and those in China, but for the purpose of keeping mills going, or of filling up vessels. This plan of No. 270. action is, however, likely in the long run to prove detrimental to the interests of the trade, as a trade, though it may not be all ledge the receipt of your letter of the 27th together unsatisfactory in an economical point of view. very palpable loss. It is probable that the state of affairs at Tientsin will not prove of permanent duration. The cause suggested by Mr. HANNEN is a plausible one; and it is not impossible that some other reason, such as the levy by the guilds of heavier local dues on goods purchased by native traders from foreign merchants at Tiontsiu, may perhaps underlie the anomaly. We have no facts which go to show this; but suggest the contingency. as that which has so frequently before been found after a time to be the ex-It is also not impossible that the Chinese Buxey, R. Extracts. Origin of Cyclones.

In Nature of 23rd of June, 1871, there is an account of a paper, by Mr. Meldrum, on the origin of storms in the Bay of Bengal, showing reason to believe that the cyclones of the Bay of Bengal and the Southern Indian Ocean originate in the meeting of the trade-winds of the northern and southern hemispheres at some distance north of the equator. I do not know of any equality complete evidence on the subject for the cyclones from SAN FRANCISCO to any city in the of other parts of the world, but there is very UNITED STATES not south of ST. LOUIS, strong reason for thinking that they always so by RAIL, at one half per cent. net. originate. The line along which the two tradewinds-meet each other approximately coincides with the equitor; when it gotully or nearly if 9701 coincides with the equator, no cyclones are formed, because the rotation of a cyclone depends on that of the parth, and the earth at the equator has no rotation round an axis drawn vertical to the horizon. Over the greater part of the Pacific, cyclones do not appear to be formed: the reason of this probably is, that in consequence of the temperature of the sea changing but little with the seasons, the two trade winds over the Pacific meet each other nearly on the equator all the year round; though I do not know how far this is confirmed by observations on the winds of that coean. But we know that in the Indian Ocean the tradewinds cross the equator and are deflected into monsoons, so that in the summer of the northern hemisphere they meet to the north of the equator, and in the summer of the southern bemisphere they meet to the south. (This statement as to seasons will ) We may consequently expect to find that the Agents in China for the above-named Comhave to be qualified presently.) farther the sin is from the equator, the farther pany, are propared to accept Marine risks, from the quator will be the meeting of the tradewinds, and consequently also the cyclones. This is the fact. In Dove's " Law of Storms," translated by Mr. Soutt, at page 193, there is a chart of the tracks of the cyclones of the Chinese Sen, which shows that they occur in all months later in the season the nearer the equator is usually their track. In the Chinese Sea, all parts of the World. where they are called typhoons, they are intelligible if we regard the cyclone region to the amount of Net Premis contributed. of the Chinese Sea as an extension of that of the Bay of Bengal; it will then be seen that the oyalones follow the sun. This, however, must be understood with the qualification that they follow the sun at some distance; the number of cyclones in the Indian Ocean appears to reach its maximum a month or two after theequinoxes. This is for the same reason that the warmest period of the year is not at but after Mid-The distribution of cyclones in the West Indian Seas is to be explained in the same way. The two trade-winds meet in the Atlantic a little to the north of the equator; for this reason, cyclones are frequent in the West Indies but unknown over the South Atlantic, and they are most numerous at the end of summer. An Opportunity for 500 tamen. (Pall Mall Gazette

A short time ago we called attention to a number of advertisements' addressed to gentlemen who have a taste for combining an enjoyment of field sports with strict economy and good company, and we specially referred to one which held out magnificent though vague promises of a succession of autumn adventures of the most enticing and romantic character. Since then we have received full particulars of the proposed expedition. The document is attractively headed "Wild Sports of the West," and refers to the southern parts of Ireland The inaccuracy of the title, however, is made up for by the details of the prospectus in other points. We are first informed that the excursion is to be under the command of a few officers and gentlemen. The programme of diversions is to include the slaughter of grouse, the hunting of the otter, and the pursuit of the eagle throughout the picturesque portions of of Munster. The grouse shooter is requested not to expect too much, but the fowler whose pleasure it may be to bag an eagle is not told

"It is proposed to visit in the most convenient, hoppily rendered by the fact of the best sport | Current Rates. ing districts in Ireland lying amongst the wildest and grandest scenery, studded thickly with the remains of feudel (sic) or encerdotal away in the rules of imposing towers and castles—each salient in historic page or prominent in traditional romance—and the crumbling abbeys monasteries, and cathedrals of that powerful Church of Rome in days of old, dotable for some tale or legend of red handed foul and vengeance, of suffering helplessness and beauty of wily priestoraft or sanctity, charity, and

of any scarcity among these noble birds

One of the places to be resorted to is the "Cumologue Mountains," where the solitude is so tremendous and beautiful that "naught disturbs the pursuit of the angler, artist, naturalist, or fowler, save the occasional tussle with a mountain trout, the whietle of the cow boy' bird to its young brood just on the wing. . . . the kleeking of the golden eagle." We confess that we ourselves have no familiarity with the "Cumologue" Mountains." but do not doubt that as soon as these delightful heights are made out, the celebrated but hitherto unknown "cow-boy bird will be added to the funca of the country. Then the subscriber to the enterprise can gratify his inclinations for rules, wild ducks,

"The exentsionists of the party will derive from such a tour as that contemplated, who ther sportsmen or merely sight-seers, an amount of pleasure and health with comfort (provided in advance), impossible to be had in any other country in the world-so varied, pleasing, and cheap, and with such little roughing or inconvenience.

or "wild but noble peasantry," cels, or somery

The charge for providing the comfort in advance is to be £50 a head (which sum is also rates, subject to a discount of 15 % to be provided in advance of the comfort, which includes, besides golden eagles, grouse, perch, trout, rambles in mountains and the music of the "cow-loy bird," a bottle " of sound claret to each man per day"). As soon seacheque is sent to the major who has devised this glorione tour, a guarantee for carrying it out-" accomplishing the expedition"-will be returned to the intending traveller without extra charge. " N.B. Luggugo (sie) and ammunition must be confined within ordinary limits." The major should not be over-bard as to the "luggage" and ammunition. Otter spears, otter hounds. pointers, setters, gons, fishing rods, must occupy a large space; an amateur taxidermist might specimen of "the cow-boy bird," and your golden Class Risk. eagle usually carries away a large amount of shot. Then there is no knowing what might be the "Cumologue Mountains." The region has been very little explored, and an Irish elk may still lurk in their fastnesses, a wolf be finshed from their caves. The major, however, offers a fair amount of sport as it is for the money. None of his subscribers can complain if he keeps his terms with them; and if he does not not up to the foot of the letter, it will probably be because of such accidents as a plague among golden engles in the spring.
